Reasons for Delays and Time Extensions in Construction ...

Delays not caused by the contractor or sub
generally warrant an extension of time.

However, many other scenarios warrant an extension of time, too.

These reasons can range from the owner delaying the start date, new or additional work requested, or even differing site conditions.

What are a Contractor's Rights to an Extension of Time?

If the delay is not caused by the contractor, then an extension of time (EOT) can be applied. This extension of time is a formal request for an additional time period
that can make up for delay losses. This is permitted by the law for numerous valid reasons and depending on your contract's time clause.

What is more important is that you must inform the other contracting parties about your time extension or you may be in a contract dispute.
